READY JUNE TWENTIETH!

MISS FRANCES BAIRD, DETECTIVE

By REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

Author of "Jarvis of Harvard," Etc.

With Colored Frontispiece and Decorated Cover, $1.25

A distinctive and original detective story of the highest order ;—the author's best work.

The interest is intense, and the hunting down of the criminal in a double mystery of murder and theft by a woman detective who outwits the men on the case through her rare ability in scientific deduction, as well as her sex sympathies and keen intuition, renders the story of especial interest to both men and women. Her solution of certain problems involving professional honour and personal happiness will prove of additional interest and arouse discussion.

Miss Baird's story is one you can recommend to your customers as something new;—the first woman detective in fiction.

"Absorbing as the narrative is from the mere force of its interest and constant progression toward the denouement there are many more admirable things about it to hold the reader's eyes to the printed page. These lie in the simple charm of the people's lives and natures, which make the book blossom like an old-fashioned flower garden in a world of books, given over to the sordid things of life. It is a book that is a sincere pleasure to recommend."—N. Y. Press.

NOTES IN SEASON.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just brought out the sixth edition, thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged, of "The Chemical Analysis of Iron," by Andrew Alexander Blair, a recognized authority in the field of chemical analysis of iron.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY have just ready Part 2 of "Graphic Shorthand," being the famous phonetic stenography of F. X. Gabelsberger, adapted to the English language by Henry Richter. The part now ready treats specially of the reporting style.

L. C. PAGE & Co. will bring out next week a dainty book of verse, entitled "Dream Verses and Others," by Elizabeth Roberts MacDonald, author of "Our Little Canadian Cousin." Mrs. MacDonald has the true poetic instinct with the happy faculty of adequate expression, and her verses have many charming terms of fancy and expressions full of grace and sweetness. Mrs. MacDonald is sister of Professor Charles G. D. Roberts and cousin of Bliss Carman.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY will publish at once "How Ferns Grow," by Margaret Slosson. This book will be of special interest to fern students in that it contains original and scientific matter in regard to the development of the different species. It aims not only to aid in recognizing the mature ferns, but in recognizing the different species in different stages of their development, and to give an idea of the origin and relation of these species. The book will contain 46 plates made by the author. They have also nearly ready "A Political History of the State of New York," by the Hon. DeAlva Stanwood Alexander, the Buffalo Congressman. It will be in two volumes and cover the period from 1777 to 1861. Vivid character studies of the Clintons, Hamilton, Burr, Van Buren, Seymour and Thurlow Weed are said to dominate the work.

THE SAALFIELD PUBLISHING COMPANY, Akron, O., will publish shortly a new volume by Mary A. Byrne, the author of "Little Dame Trot," containing four stories of which the one from which the book takes its title, "The Fairy Chaser," is the longest. It tells of two boys who choose gardening for their work, the one to raise vegetables and the other flowers. The twin gardens flourish side by side until the florist one days sees a fairy flower, and its ever-changing beauties rob his own flowers of their charms. His little patch grows up to weeds, and the poor flowers are almost choked out, but still he spends long hours watching for another glimpse of the phantom flower—but to tell the way he happened to be called the "Fairy Chaser" would be to spoil the author's pretty story. The other stories in the book are "Kitty's Ring," "The Magic Mirrors" and "Cecilia's Gift." Miss Anna B. Craig has furnished six full-page drawings. They have also nearly ready "The Woodland Elf," a book for children by Florence A. Evans, which contains a series of stories told by a sprite to a little girl lost in the woods. This "woodland elf" explains all the wonderful things that children want to know—why cat-tails grow, why snakes shed their skins, why Indian pipes grow, how the morning glory came to be, how the Darning Needle got its name, why wishes no longer come true, and so on through the list. Carll B. Williams has furnished a number of attractive pictures for the book.

He was of good Scotch and English mixture, and while trifling around in Pennsylvania met a pretty farmer's daughter and was compelled to marry her. He settled money upon her and left her to make his fortune in South America. He became steady and a successful speculator. Years after, hearing of the death of his deserted wife, he married a widow with a daughter. After years his son turns up out West, thirty years of age, brings him the first wife's forgiveness, and falls in love with the second wife's daughter. The father had become a violent politician, and his end was sad. The rest found happiness.

Even when such persons were only creatures of imagination or lost and unattained ideals, this enterprising firm found something that seemed to fit the case and satisfy the seeker. Purports to be "a translation from the original," and tells of poor maligned Eve's experiences in the Garden of Eden and afterwards. The illustrations make Eve's troubles very real. Under all his absurdities Mark Twain offers a philosophic study of woman's nature and the difficulty she has always had in pleasing man, who cannot live without her.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 16, 1906.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE COPYRIGHT HEARINGS.

THE hearings on copyright before the Congressional Committees on Patents, reported elsewhere, developed both the strength of the bill as a whole and the strength and character of the opposition to or criticisms upon it. It was evidently regarded by the committees, as well as by most of the speakers, as a bill of excellent structure and remarkable workmanship, and there was general appreciation of the good work that has been done by Librarian Putnam and the Register of Copyrights in the shaping of it.

The most vigorous opposition came from the "sound-record" men, who are in the position to-day of the literary "pirates" of a generation ago, and who repeated much the same arguments "on behalf of the American people," really directed against the theory of property in thought as well as things. It was asserted that the public interest would be greatly endangered, in respect to music, by extending copyright protection over mechanical reproductions, and it was claimed for the independent manufacturers of mechanical instruments and makers of sound-records that the proposed copyright bill had its origin in a "star-chamber log-rolling conspiracy" engineered by the Aeolian Company, which had unsuccessfully sought, by means of costly suits, to obtain a monopoly of the sound-record business and was now adopting this other means. The accusation was a surprise certainly to most of the participants in the conferences, who were quite unwitting of their guilt, but it was steadily repeated. It developed that the Aeolian Company, it was claimed, had a contract with leading music publishers by which sound-records of compositions under their control were to be made only by the Aeolian Company, which would prevent the popular music of the day from being duplicated by independent manufacturers, so that their business would be ruined.

It may be said passim that the international copyright amendment did not put all publishing into the hands of any one house, and that it has resulted in large increase in the payment of American authors. The sound-record men also took the radical ground that the word "writings" in the Constitution does not cover sound-records, although the same arguments might exclude sculptures and other admittedly copyrightable material. It seems probable that the battle royal over the phraseology of the Constitution will have to be re-fought.

One speaker also took the ground that the phrase "limited period" in the Constitution did not justify a term for life and fifty years, though he advocated a straight term of a hundred years for original and fifty years for derivative works. The old Pearsall-Smith royalty scheme showed itself again in an implied suggestion that the several manufacturers of music rolls, etc., should have equal rights on payment of royalty, which would, of course, put a composer's property practically out of his control. Another important criticism was that the bill in extending existing copyrights would prevent the music-roll manufacturers from continuing to manufacture previously-issued records; but this view was not considered by the proponents of the bill to be justified, as the intent was clearly not to disturb the existing status and to ground new copyrights only on the new arrangement of an old work. Mr. G. W. Ogilvie scored a point in behalf of authors by pointing out that the provision to safeguard publishers who at the end of an existing copyright might hold the plates and be put at disadvantage by an unfair author might operate against the author if the publisher-assignee was on his part unreasonable, and it seemed that this feature of the bill, as well as some other details, might call for amendment.

There was criticism also of the proposal that copyright should date from and depend upon publication and the affixing of copyright notice to all copies published by authority within the United States. The whole spirit of the bill is to relieve the author from the dangers of the present copyright system, by which slight informalities may jeopard the very existence of his property. Mr. Ogilvie urged in behalf of legitimate publishers that there should be certainty as to all these points; but the desirability of preventing merely incidental lapses from forfeiting copyright is steadily and rightly adhered to by those who support the bill. It was pointed out that an infringer, misled by lack of any observances of requirements, could not be mulcted for innocent acts, or until after proper notice.

On the whole, the hearing indicated probabilities for a successful consideration of the bill in Congress, though doubtless with incidental amendment. It was authoritatively stated that the bill would not be reported until the following session of Congress, which opens in December next.

THE CONGRESSIONAL HEARINGS ON COPYRIGHT.

THE hearings on the proposed copyright bill before the Congressional Committees last week were of especial importance and dignity, the Senate and House Committees on Patents meeting in joint session in the fitting and spacious Senate Reading Room within the Library of Congress building.

Senator Alfred B. Kittredge (S. D.), Chairman; Senators Moses E. Clapp (Minn.), Reed Smoot (Utah), Stephen R. Mallory (Fla.), Murphy J. Foster (La.), Asbury C. Latimer (S. C.); and Representative Frank D. Currier (N. H.), Chairman, and Representatives Solomon R. Dresser (Pa.), Joseph M. Dixon (Mont.), Edward H. Hinshaw (Neb.), Robert W. Bonynge (Colo.), William W. Campbell (O.), Andrew J. Barchfeld (Pa.), J. C. Chaney (Ind.), Charles McGavin (Ill.), William Sulzer (N. Y.), George S. Legare (S. C.), Edwin Y. Webb (N. C.), Robert G. Southall (Va.), John Gill, Jr. (Md.), constitute the Senate and House Committees on Patents respectively.

Four sessions were held, beginning at ten o'clock each morning and lasting through the noon hour from Wednesday, June 6, through Saturday, June 9, these being preceded by a conference of those interested, pro and con, on Tuesday afternoon, at which, however, there was only general discussion as to the procedure at the hearings. Both Senate and House Committees were well represented at the sessions, and those speaking pro and con had the most patient attention and courteous treatment, despite the provocations of the hot weather. Something like a hundred persons, varying at the several sittings, were present as participants or spectators, the largest representation being from those interested in phonograph and like discs, perforated music rolls and the manufacture of mechanical instruments, as the "sound-record" men, having no organization, had not been participants in the previous conferences of organizations interested in copyright.

After Librarian Putnam's presentation of the bill on behalf of the Copyright Office, with the lucid and impartial statement summarized in our last week's issue, the floor was given, at the request of the American Copyright League, to representatives of the "author classes" as those first of all concerned in copyright protection. R. R. Bowker, as vice-president and delegate, spoke for the League, regretting the absence of the president, Edmund Clarence Stedman, whose health did not permit his attendance, but who sent his word of approval for the bill as a working basis for the consideration of Congress, and of the secretary, Robert Underwood Johnson, the alert watchman of the League in copyright legislation, who had returned from Europe only the previous Saturday. He asked that the committees would specifically hear "Mark Twain," an active member of the Council of the League, for letters; Bronson Howard, president of the American Dramatists' Club and a vice-president of the Copyright League, for drama; Sousa and Victor Herbert, for music; and Frank D. Millet, of the National Academy of Design and Fine Art Federation, also a member of the Council of the League, for art, but neither Mr. Clemens nor Mr. Howard reached the hearings. He stated that the League had submitted at the first sessions of the copyright conferences a memorandum which had been made the basis for the early discussions, the points of which had been covered in the bill, with the exception of the request for separate treatment of literary, dramatic, musical and artistic works and the proposal to cover certain contractual relations between the author and his publishing representative. The first proposal had been abandoned after an honest endeavor, because of the repetition and complication which it involved, and the second because of the objections of the legal authorities to handling the law of contracts in a copyright bill. It had been necessary for the several interests in the conferences to yield such points, but the proposed bill was not a compromise in the sense of being "something in which everybody got what they didn't want," but rather a consensus of opinion on the essentials, and he stated that the League supported the proposed bill as a just, broad, clear and workable basis for Congressional discussion. He urged that the committees in their sessions and in guiding the bill through the Congress should bear in mind that the rights of authors were first of all to be considered throughout, and secondly that the bill was one of careful structure, in which it was hoped the committees would continue to have the well considered helpfulness of the Librarian and Register of Copyrights.

John Philip Sousa, remarking "I wish I had my brass band here instead" as he took the stand, talked out roundly about "the talking machine people" from whom he had "yet to receive the first cent" for the "piracy" which had placed from twenty to one hundred of his compositions on every one of the manufacturer's catalogues, and he lamented vigorously that the mechanical instruments were taking the musical initiative from our people and practically suppressing vocal and instrumental music among us. Victor Herbert followed in the same strain, and regretted the absence of his many brother composers who hadn't the price to come and speak for themselves.

Frank D. Millet also stated for the artists that the present copyright act was so defective in protecting artistic works that for his own part he had not received 75 cents from the reproductions of his paintings and had given up attempting to protect them by copyright.

Horace Pettit, of Philadelphia, representing the Victor Talking Machine Company, suggested amendments as to the mechanical reproduction of music, but assented to the general proposition that sound records should be covered by copyright.

Paul Fuller, chairman of the Committee of the New York Bar Association, who had taken a leading part in the conferences, then presented certain legal considerations in favor of the proposed bill and controverted the position of the sound-record representatives, expressing his own opinion that the Supreme Court would be likely to reverse the decision of the Circuit Court on this subject, and to include sound records among copyrightable reproductions.

The second day's hearing was opened by Colonel Stephen H. Olin, counsel for the American Publishers' Copyright League, and representing also by arrangement, made to save time, several of the organizations of the publishing interests taking part in the conferences. He made a lucid, effective and helpful presentation of the bill on behalf of the reproductive interests. He explained also, by request of Mr. Bostwick, delegate of the American Library Association, who had been obliged to return to New York, the official position of the American Library Association in favor of the arrangements reached in the bill with respect to questions of importation affecting libraries.

George W. Ogilvie, of Chicago, as a book publisher, then made extended criticism of the bill, complaining especially of the provision which imposed imprisonment on an infringer of copyright, while a man guilty of making a false notice of copyright was let off with a fine. He insisted that the copyright notice should include the date, and protested that the notice should be required on all copies of every authorized edition, foreign as well as American. He stated that on asking from the Copyright Office whether a book of a certain title in an English edition had been copyrighted in this country, he was informed by the Copyright Office that it could find no record of such a title, which he made the basis of an argument against the omission of copyright notices from an English edition of an American book. He also pointed out that the clause "extending existing copyrights," which, in the case of a previous assignment, required the joining of the assignee with the author in the claim for extension, might enable an unscrupulous publisher to cut down the payment to the author by threatening not to join in the claim for extension.

William B. Cutter, librarian of the Forbes Library, Northampton, Mass., representing a number of libraries, of which he gave a list, excepted from the official position of the American Library Association, and urged that the bill should not in any way reduce the library privileges given under the present statute, as modified in 1891. He stated frankly his opinion that publishers had made the present copyright protection the basis of a trust, which resulted in a higher price to libraries for books.

Frank H. Scott, president of the Century Company, spoke in behalf of publishers, and thoroughly supported the bill. He mentioned that Mr. Ogilvie's reference was to one of the Webster Dictionary series in an English edition. He stated that the purpose of the clause last criticised by Mr. Ogilvie was to give fair protection to publishers who had plates and stock of existing copyright works, and who might be put at serious disadvantage should an unreasonable author make terms with other publishers which would prevent the use of such plates. He also replied to Mr. Cutter that English editions could undoubtedly be imported by libraries through a publisher of the American editions.

F. D. Bethune, of Wetmore & Jenner, appearing for the Reproductive Arts Copyright League, the organization of the manufacturing lithographers, spoke in general support of the bill with certain suggestions for improvement.

The third day's hearing was given, by arrangement, chiefly to the representatives of the "sound-record" interests, and developed what proved to be the sensational feature of the hearings in a charge that the Aeolian Company, constituting a trust, was behind the copyright measure in an endeavor to break up the business of the independent makers of mechanical instruments and perforated rolls. There was also a rumor, though this did not appear in the expressions before the committees, that the Victor Talking Machine Co., using disc records, and the Edison Phonograph Co., using cylinder records, were disposed to join in support of the bill from a like motive. J. Howlett Davis, an inventor of East Orange, N. J., appeared in defense of his own patents and interests, and claimed that the passage of the bill covering sound-records would practically destroy the value of his inventions, because it would prevent the free use of sound-records by mechanical instruments such as he had invented. Mr. Davis stated frankly that he was unused to public speaking, and the courteous attention and helpfulness on the part of the committee in giving him every opportunity to make his views known were pleasantly noticed.

J. J. O'Connell, representing ten independent manufacturers of mechanical pianos, made the initial attack upon the trusts, and submitted in evidence contracts between the Aeolian Company and certain music publishers giving the former exclusive rights for the mechanical reproduction of musical compositions controlled by the latter.

Simon T. Cameron, of Washington, appearing specifically for the Columbia Phonograph Company, and generally for the similar interests, made an elaborate argument covering eight or more specific points against the bill as a trust measure. He claimed that the word "writings" must be confined to visible reproductions, and that the perforated roll and phonograph records could not be read—a position which was challenged in a series of interruptions. It was stated that Mr. Sousa had received considerable payments for playing into sound-recording instruments, and that in his earlier years he had requested the use of his music on phonograph discs. Mr. Sousa at once rose and declared this to be untrue; in a controversy which ensued it was proved that the management of Sousa's band, not including Mr. Sousa's personal leadership, had received payment for playing his compositions and those of other composers into a phonograph recorder, but that Sousa, as a composer, had not received a penny for the use of his compositions. Sousa also explained that in the early years of the phonograph he had considered it only as a toy and not seriously as a musical instrument. It was claimed that after a phonograph concern had bought a sheet of music, which covered royalty to a composer, such a concern should be free to reproduce the music mechanically just as Mr. Sousa would be free to play on a cornet which he had bought.

Appearances were also made for the Perforated Record Company, of 34th Street, New York, by Merrill E. Gates, Jr., of Eaton & Lewis, and for the Perforated Music Roll Company, of 23d Street, New York, in the absence of General Griffin in Europe.

The fourth day's hearing continued the subject in an argument by Paul Cromelin, vice-president of the Columbia Phonograph Company; but the leading argument of the day, which practically concluded the conference and which was one of the most important heard by the committee, was that of Albert H. Walker, of Hartford, whose work on patents is well known in the courts, who stated that he had been of counsel in the sound-record cases, but that he appeared at the hearing "in behalf of the American public." He at once complimented and condemned the bill, taking the position that the word "writings" in the Constitution did not justify the use of the word "works," which replaces it in the bill, and particularly that it should not cover the inclusion of sound-records. Mr. Walker gave a rapid sketch of English and American legislation and decisions and proposed a number of amendments to the bill, some of which evidently met with favor from members of the committees who throughout manifested a keen interest in the bill, and in several cases indicated their approval or objection by keen questioning of the speakers. He claimed that the phrase "limited period" did not justify a term for life and fifty years, but declared himself in favor of a term of one hundred years for original works, citing the case of the daughters of Mrs. H. B. Stowe as evidence of the injustice of the present term. He made an elaborate argument to show that intangible property could not claim the benefit of "the principle of continuity," on which property rights in general are based, although he defended copyright on other grounds. He also suggested that the manufacturing clause should be extended by including other processes as well as printing and lithography under its provisions. He especially criticised the legal sections and the remedies proposed in the bill.

Before the close of the sessions Senator Kittredge announced that the Senate committee, having received authority from that body to sit during the recess, would continue its hearings after the close of the session. Representative Currier, for the House Committee, stated that it had not been given similar authority, but that it would meet again on the first Monday in December prepared to hear further arguments. It was directed that the stenographic report of the hearings should be printed for the use of each house.

CHAMPLIN'S YOUNG FOLKS' CYCLOPÆDIA OF COMMON THINGS.

THROUGH a misunderstanding there appeared a statement that the new edition of John D. Champlin's "Young Folks' Cyclopædia of Common Things" is based on "The Little Cyclopædia of Common Things" published in England and now in this country, as by the Rev. Sir George W. Cox. This happens to be far from the facts, which are so peculiar as to be rather interesting. The English edition of Mr. Champlin's book was published by arrangement with Henry Holt & Company, (the American publishers,) by Kegan Paul, Trench & Co., of London. Their first edition bore the name of the Rev. Sir George W. Cox as sole author. Upon Henry Holt & Company calling the English publishers' attention to this, they changed the title-page, putting on Mr. Champlin's name as author, and that of the Rev. Sir George W. Cox as editor. They subsequently sold the plates to Swan Sonnenschein & Co., who issued a new edition, on the title-page of which the name of the Rev. Sir George W. Cox again appeared as sole author. When the American publishers called the attention of Swan Sonnenschein & Co. to the case they were surprised, as they had not known what the former English publishers had done about the book, and they promptly ordered back the copies they sent to America, conceding that their sale here would infringe Mr. Champlin's copyright.

THE WORST FATE THAT CAN HAPPEN TO A BOOK.

Mr. Richard Bagot, according to Arthur Pendenys in a recent letter to his "Dear Belinda," in Hatchard's Books of Today, "is not pleased with the newspapers and their critics. Apparentiy, they do not review all his books equally well, and he has been appealing on the subject to that high tribunal, the Nineteenth Century. There are at least two ways of achieving a reputation as a novelist: One is to start off at a great rate with a first book and thus suddenly to spring into notice, and the other way is to patiently educate a public and create an audience for yourself in spite of all criticism. No one was ever written down except by himself. Press criticism as at present organized is a very kind-hearted and generous affair. Personal feeling rarely comes in except to praise a book. Reviewers are pestered by authors and even more by authoresses, most of whom have written poor books. Good wine needs no bush. The vanity of both authors and authoresses is extraordinary, and their sensitiveness to criticism is amazing. They readily swallow large spoonfuls of jam, but they positively choke when they are confronted with the powder. Nothing, it seems, will ever teach authors that the worst fate that can happen to a book is for it to be entirely ignored. The worst review is better than none at all. Novelists should remember that they are a privileged class in that they get their work into notice for nothing."

THE EDITORIAL PUBLISHER.

A publisher, according to the London Publisher and Bookseller, "should know what kind of books are in demand, just as much as an editor should know the kind of articles to put in his periodical. In both cases there is no lack of competent editors to carry out an idea."

OBITUARY NOTES.

The death of E. B. Holden, on the 8th inst., in New York City, will be keenly felt by a large circle of collectors. He was one of a few, busy and happy in the gathering of historical books, prints and autographs relating to the history of his own country—above all history and graphic matter pertaining to the city of New York. Unselfish in his pleasure, much of his spare time was devoted to the stimulation of taste and the diffusion of knowledge. His work in the Grolier Club was of the highest value and most practical. He believed in the spreading of bibliographical knowledge and in the cultivation of taste, and willingly labored to promote the success of the club's many exhibitions. In his private collection he accomplished wonders in gathering the portraiture of Washington, the rude attempts of the early American engravers, the early and the best productions of Europe, together with all the varieties of later publications. The great Grolier publication of Washington portraiture received a vast amount of painstaking attention, and up to the time of his death he was gathering data for correction and addition. The portraiture of Franklin came next to that of Washington, and the preparation of the forthcoming publication of the Grolier Club has been the latest object of his literary solicitude. Mr. Holden's interest in native art is reflected in a large collection, inclusive of the rough work of the early engravers as well as in the important and artistic productions of the later masters, examples of Norman, Doolittle, Paul Revere, Tiebout, Edwin, Durand, etc. He did not, however, confine himself to the completion of a special line, but took a catholic interest in what was choice and valuable in various departments of art and literature. He was active in the Society of Iconophiles, the object of which was the preservation, by engraving, of the historic and interesting features of the streets and buildings of New York City. As a collector, he was studious and his attitude towards his books and prints was that of a genuine bibliophile, free from jealousy and without mercenary or speculative motives. Collectors and dealers named him but to praise. To the profanum vulgus the collector is an eccentric enthusiast—popularly it is not understood to how great an extent the collector is the saviour of history. Mr. Holden had an astonishingly quick eye for technical and artistic qualities of a print. No matter how minute a line or a difference in edition, he saw it. Jos. F. Sabin.

Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, daughter of George Palmer Putnam and sister of the present members of the publishing firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, died on June 10, at her home, No. 19 East Forty-second Street, New York. Mrs. Jacobi was born on August 31, 1842, in London, where her father was established at the time as representative of his firm in New York. In 1847 her parents returned to New York, and her early schooling was entrusted to private tutors. In 1862 Mrs. Jacobi entered the Women's Medical College in Philadelphia, from which she was graduated in 1864. When she left the college she heard that her brother, George Haven Putnam, lay dying in New Orleans. Disregarding all risk and discomfort, she set out for the Southern city, and did not leave it until she had nursed him back to health. Then she resumed her work. After being an interne at the New England Hospital in Boston she went to Paris, where her pluck and persistence, backed up by undoubted ability, won the applause and admiration of the French, her successful entry into the Ecole de Medecine encouraging scores of other women. Instead of taking a post-graduate course, she began at the beginning, doing all her work over again, finally being graduated in 1870. She stayed in Paris all through the siege, pursuing her academic work. Then she came back to this country, and two years later, in 1873, was married to Dr. Abraham Jacobi, a fellow sufferer with Carl Schurz in the unsuccessful attempt in 1848 to procure political freedom for Germany. Mrs. Jacobi's work soon made her a prominent figure. Medical brochures, monographs, essays on philosophical subjects, poetry and stories all flowed from her pen. Her work on medical subjects have long been recognized as authoritative on whatever subject she discussed. Chief among such works are, besides the Boylston prize essay on "The Question of Rest for Women During Menstruation," "The Value of Life," "Cold Pack and Massage in Anæmia" and "Hysteria, Brain Tumor and Other Essays." She also wrote "Studies in Primary Education," "Common Sense Applied to Woman Suffrage," and many other articles in medical and educational journals. Although always a believer in the theory of woman suffrage, Dr. Jacobi did not take an active interest in it until comparatively late in life.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett has written a series of fairy tales, which will begin in the October St. Nicholas and continue through several numbers. The stories are based on a quaint and humorous conceit, carried out, it is said, in Mrs. Burnett's happiest vein. The stories are to have a number of illustrations in color by Harrison Cady.

A. E. W. Mason, author of "Four Feathers" and "Miranda of the Balcony," has written a new novel, "Running Water," serial publication of which will begin in the August Century. The scenes are laid in the Alps, then in England, and later in the Alps again, and the story is one of lively adventure as well as of character development.

The annual summer number of The School Journal, to be issued under date of June 30, will be an "Appreciation Number." It will contain contributions from prominent educators in all sections of the country, giving due credit to teachers whose names are lost to fame, but whose unselfish devotion to the work of training the young has done much for the writers. Among the special articles will be a description, accompanied by unique illustrations, of "Appreciation Day" as celebrated in the Girls' Technical High School of New York City, and a beautiful tribute to Jennie Dean, the founder of the Manassas Industrial School, by Miss Edith C. Westcott, principal of the West Side High School, Washington, D. C.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Gradually he bought up all the property around to 278 West Sixth Street and erected a three-story building which he occupied for years, finally settling at 527 Central Avenue. "Warren's" was a popular resort for young people, and the Post says that with Mr. Warren's retirement the children lose one of their stanchest friends. Mr. Warren, who is now in his seventy-fifth year, recently said to a Post reporter: "I have found that a man can succeed in business with brains as his only capital if he works hard enough. Honesty is always the best policy, and a smile and a pleasant word will go a long way."

Fairmount, W. Va.—J. N. Chilson has opened a book and stationery store here, next door to Watson's Hotel.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY have brought out in their National Library "Twixt Glove and Sword," by Archibald Clavering Gunter, bound in neat paper covers.

AT the regular monthly meeting of the trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held on the 12th inst., Moffat, Yard & Co. and Cupples & Leon were elected to membership. On the same date R. F. Fenno & Co. and the Hills & Hafely Co. filed application for membership.

WALTER M. HILL, Chicago, announces to those discriminating readers who hold in pleasant memory the bookish story, "The Bondage of Ballinger," the early appearance of another story by Roswell Field, corresponding very closely in its general nature and to some extent in whimsicality. "Madeline" treats of the notable friendship and confidential discourses of two booklovers, Sir Dives and Master Pauper.

JOHN S. WISE is still constantly receiving letters from all over the world in regard to his book, "The End of an Era," although it is several years since it was published. His thrilling memories of Civil War times have aroused a remarkable and ever extending interest, and Houghton, Mifflin & Co. report that they are now printing a fifteenth edition of the book. It has been added to almost every public library in the country.

THE discussion initiated by Dr. Crapsey's book, "Religion and Politics," published last year by Thomas Whittaker, promises to become much more than a local affair confined to the Episcopal Diocese of Western New York. The appeal taken by Dr. Crapsey from the judgment of the local court adverse to him and to his book will come before some of the most eminent men in the Episcopal Church, whose decision of the issues involved will be a matter of great interest to the religious world.

PAUL GUENTHER, 68 Rue Mazarine, Paris, has just ready "Lectures on Babylonia and Palestine," delivered under the auspices of Holy Trinity Church, in Paris, by Dr. Stephen Langdon, Fellow of Columbia University. The author, one of the foremost Assyriologists of America, and a recognized authority on everything connected with Hebrew history and literature, incorporates in this book the results of the most recent researches in the East and presents a true and original picture of life and customs in the times of old.

THE SAALFIELD PUBLISHING COMPANY, Akron, O., have just ready "The Pond in the Marshy Mallow," by Miss Anna H. Woodruff, illustrated by H. H. Bennett, the story of a boy and girl who were led by the spirit of the pond into a despotic kingdom, where they saw all the fish, insects and curiosities that lived in the pond obediently follow fixed laws from which there was no appeal. This interesting pond-lore is illustrated with over fifty half-tone drawings by H. H. Bennett, who has handled his difficult material most effectively.

CHARLES H. KERR & COMPANY, Chicago, have closed a contract for the manufacture of their own plates of the first volume of Marx's "Capital," which hitherto they have been importing from England. The American edition will correspond page for page with the English edition, but the plates will be electrotyped from new type. They also announce the second and third volumes of the International Library of Social Science, two books by J. Howard Moore, entitled "The Universal Kinship" and "Better World Philosophy," which are receiving great praise from socialists of standing throughout the world.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish shortly four more volumes of the Pocket edition of the works of George Meredith. These books will be "Rhoda Fleming," "The Adventures of Harry Richmond," "The Egoist," and "Beauchamp's Career." An important publication of the month will be the first volume of Dr. Charles A. Briggs's "Commentary on the Psalms." This volume contains the introduction to the whole work and a commentary on fifty psalms. The work belongs in the International Critical Commentary Series. A number of important educational books will also be brought out this month, including the "Advanced Geography," by Charles F. King, Master of Dearborn School, Boston, and "Stories of American Explorers," by Wilbur Fiske Gordy, Superintendent of Schools in Springfield, Mass.

BERTRAM DOBELL, 77 Charing Cross Road, London, Eng., proposes to publish by subscription a number of literary works of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries which he has recently discovered. Among these is a collection of poems by Thomas Traherne, entitled "Centuries of Meditation;" "The Poems of William Strode," 1602-1644, now first collected from manuscript and other sources, together with his play, "The Floating Island," now first reprinted; "Gleanings from Manuscripts," poems and dramatic works by unknown or little known English writers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, together with pieces by well-known poets never before published, now first printed from manuscripts; "The Letters, Speeches and Poems of Sir Nicholas Bacon," 1509-1579, now first printed from the original manuscript;" and "The Partiall Law," an entirely unknown play written sometime between 1620 and 1630.

Buster Brown Book

On June 9th, 1906, there was published in the Publishers' Weekly, an advertisement by Mess. Cupples & Leon, announcing that by arrangement with the New York Herald they are the authorized publishers of Buster Brown pictures in book form and that a book was ready entitled "Buster Brown, his Dog Tige, and their Jolly Times."

In the same issue of the Publishers' Weekly, Mr. R. F. Outcault also advertised that Frederick A. Stokes Company was the sole publisher of his book, and that he would prosecute to the full extent of the law, all publishers or dealers who infringed on his rights. This latter advertisement of Mr. Outcault is misleading to the trade.

Mr. Outcault left the employ of the New York Herald and entered the employ of the New York American and Journal to draw pictures for it, and the Journal began to put out comic sections of its Sunday newspapers under the name "Buster Brown." The Herald brought a suit to restrain the use of this name by the Journal. Mr. Outcault and the Journal brought a counter suit to restrain the Herald from continuing the manufacture and sale of comic sections of its newspaper containing pictures of the same class and style as those which it had been publishing when Mr. Outcault was in its employ.

The United States Circuit Court held that the Herald was the exclusive owner of the name "Buster Brown" for comic sections of newspapers, and issued an order restraining the further use of this name by the Journal. This decision was affirmed on appeal. At the same time, the Circuit Court refused to restrain the Herald from continuing to produce the pictures in question.

All the pictures produced by the Herald in its comic sections were copyrighted by it.

The pictures published in our book entitled "Buster Brown, his Dog Tige and their Jolly Times," are reproductions of pictures published in and copyrighted by the New York Herald Company, which Company has given us exclusive permission to do so.

Mr. Outcault, nor anyone else, has the right to issue any advertisement inferring, or intending to infer, that we are infringing on any of his rights in publishing this book.

We therefore beg to notify our friends and customers in the trade, that we shall protect their rights, and also dealers who handle our books, to the full extent of the law.

Second Large Edition Now Ready

The Girl Out There

By KARL EDWIN HARRIMAN

Author of "The Girl and the Deal"

A tale of country life, breathing the freedom and freshness of the open, and bringing in some of the best known types of rural characters, such as the country store-keeper, the village doctor, the wily old miser, the bluff but kind-hearted farmer, the village postmaster, etc. The book is spicy reading, interspersed as it is with the shrewd observations and witty remarks of these children of the soil. The following is a delightful example: "If I wus on a desert island without no calendur nor anythin', I'd know when Sunday'd come 'cause I'd be sleepy after dinner."

The Religion of Nature

By E. KAY ROBINSON

It will be interesting to see how this book will be received by the disciples of the modern humanitarian movement and the supporters of societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals, who have always gone on the assumption that animals, like human beings, were susceptible to pain and suffering. Mr. Robinson absolutely denies this, and shows conclusively that man alone, of all created beings, is conscious of suffering, and that even in human beings pain is only a relative term, and is only a spur to further effort towards happiness and well being. It is to be expected that many of those interested in securing the welfare of animals will refuse to accept Mr. Robinson's premises or conclusions, and will regard his book as a menace, though, as Mr. Robinson shows, there is nothing in his position to make men less humane, but rather the reverse. On the other hand, those who have found, in the widespread cruelty throughout all Nature, a terrible obstacle to a belief in a personal God will welcome this little book as a positive support to revealed religion. Cloth, small 12mo. Net, 90 cents; postpaid, $1.00.

WALTER REED
and Yellow Fever

By HOWARD A. KELLY, M.D.

Professor of Gynecological Surgery at the Johns Hopkins University.

It is not only an interesting biography of a remarkable man and a full account of his brilliant discovery, but a complete review of the history of yellow fever with a discussion of the methods by which it is now under our control. The book is an important contribution to medical and scientific literature. It will be a valuable addition to any library. Cloth, 12mo. Twelve half-tone illustrations. Net, $1.50*; postpaid,* $1.62.

C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Lady Betty Across the Water

By the Authors of "My Friend the Chauffeur"

¶ A delightful transcontinental love comedy which treats of a pretty titled English girl's discovery of America—and the American gentleman. A true romance of modern life ranging from West Point to the prairies.

¶ LADY BETTY is a perfect dream of a pink and white little English peeress. Every man she meets wants to marry her and the masculine readers will envy the lucky fellow—a fine type of the bronzed stalwart American gentleman—who finally wins her heart and hand.

"The popularity of Lady Betty, who is a sweet, ingenious, lovable English girl, may be taken as a foregone conclusion." Milwaukee Free Press.

"A winsome and vivacious girl, whose sunny presence makes the book a joy. Surely the person not charmed by this English maiden would be hard to please." Newark News.

"One has only to glance at the bright face of the lady herself on the cover to feel that something breezy is coming inside. And the feeling is right. It comes." N. Y. World.

"One of the most thoroughly refreshing stories in contrast with the arid waste of things published." Boston Globe.

HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS'

Red Saunders' Pets and Other Critters

By the Author of "Red Saunders"

"There are animal stories, uproarious and mirth-provoking, and giving evidence of a vocabulary so rich and so picturesque and so brilliant as to make one sick with envy. They are the best Red Saunders has told." Buffalo Express.

"It is good spring medicine, for it will jolt the liver with laughter." Cleveland Leader.
